FOREWORD

This issue of the Journal of Research and Development of Social Welfare features some social problems in Indonesia. From problem conflict sourced from the differences of religion and ethnic, where Abu Hanifah and Hemat Sitepu, said we must remain alert to the inherent conflict in those who could still come back. The thing is, how do we resolve conflict without using violence and the loss of lives? The community possibly to work together through social organizations, both facilitated by government and local wisdom. Nurdin Widodo, in the study of neglected adolescence profile shows the description of related aspects which as main cause of the neglect then served in PSBR. The sample chosen were PSBR in West Sumatera, Riau, East Java and South Sulawesi.

The other social problems is about resistance to the planed construction of waste to energy (WTE) in Gudebage, Bandung and other impacts forecast will appear. Muhtar analyze, the people closest to the location plan, the worried with their economic aspects, health and behavioral changes at local community. Next, Nina Karinina in her article discusses the effectivity of women empowerment programme implementation. The role of institution for empowering women, and the changing economic condition of those engaged as members of that institution is a focus the discusses.

Research of social potency and social resources of less developed regions by Sutaat has tried to find varies informs about remote areas. Like other disadvantaged areas, results of this study was recommended to conduct social development program, infrastructure development, and alternatives developments program such as social empowerment and tourism development.
